Guatemala: Enticing investors

More than seven decades of excellent political and trade relations between Guatemala and Japan were further reinforced by the recent visit of President Álvaro Colom to Tokyo. During his successful trip, President Colom met with several government officials and business leaders and highlighted his country’s outstanding investment opportunities.

During the successful Oct 21-23 presidential visit, President Colom met with several government officials and business leaders and highlighted his country’s outstanding investment opportunities.

President Colom met with Prime Minister Naoto Kan, President of Guatemala

President Colom met with Prime Minister Naoto Kan, President of Guatemala

Akihito

President of Guatemala

President of Guatemala

President Colom met with Prime Minister Naoto Kan, President of Guatemala

President Colom met with Prime Minister Naoto Kan, President of Guatemala

Guatemalan President Álvaro Colom talks with Emperor Akihito during his recent high-profile visit to Tokyo.

“Traditionally, Guatemala and Japan have enjoyed long and fruitful relations that have contributed to stable growth and to the welfare of our two countries. Today, we reaffirm our strong commitment to the future of our bilateral relations. The visit of President Colom is a reflection of the high priority that Japan attaches to its relations with our country.” Prime Minister Naoto Kan

“Guatemala is a very close investment mechanism that can perfectly handle large investments.”

Guatemalan President Álvaro Colom talks with Emperor Akihito during his recent high-profile visit to Tokyo.

Our meeting today has further strengthened relations between our two countries.

Emperor Akihito

Japan’s Head of State

President Colom and Prime Minister, Naoto Kan, reaffirm their commitment to strong bilateral relations.

Our meeting today has further strengthened relations between our two countries.

President Colom visited Japan and was very impressed with the country’s well-planned transport system. President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.

President Colom said he was particularly interested in utilizing Japanese technology that would increase 50 percent of glass, 30 percent of aluminum and 50 percent of paper.
Driving social development

President Álvaro Colom and first lady Sandra Torres de Colom are spearheading their country’s social development through a range of health, education, and social projects.

According to a recent forecast by the Brookings Institution of Latin America and the Caribbean, Guatemala will have the largest number of inhabitants in the population-aging period up to 2050. So far, the country has made strong progress in the fight against poverty in recent years thanks to the leadership of President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, who spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy that have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

In addition to the launch of government agencies and programs to manage projects and programs, both President Colom and his first lady regularly travel to rural areas to see for themselves how their humanitarian efforts are making a difference to people’s lives.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country. Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country. Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.

Colom and Torres de Colom have spearheaded the successful peace accord in 1996 that marked the end of decades of conflict. Since taking office in early 2008, President Colom and his wife, Sandra Torres de Colom, have spearheaded the nation’s efforts against malnutrition, poverty and illiteracy and are determined to increase that number to 30 percent for the years to come. They are working hard to ensure that these efforts will, in the final analysis, provide broader access to health and education throughout the country.